INTERFAITH CENTER ON CORPORATE RESPONSIBILITY

Vigorously challenging corporations to make peace and social justice concerns part of the decision-making formula in business, the religious community has been one of the most active advocates of corporate social responsibility by American business. The churches are stewards of billions of dollars of stocks and bonds in pensions and endowments, who are concerned about the quality and dignity of human life. ICCR-member churches, dioceses and religious communities, have articulated the purpose of their working together in ICCR:

We, the member organizations of the Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility, accept the unique challenge to the faith community to address issues of corporate social responsibility with our resources, particularly our investments. We covenant to work ecumenically for justice in and through ecomomic structures and for stewardship of the earth and its resources.

How Can Others Participate in ICCR?

Institutional Membership in ICCR, which includes voting membership on ICCR's governing board, is open to any religious group or denominational board or agency with a minimum contribution of $1,500 for a single agency or $1,500 for a coalition of groups. Your church or religious community may already belong to ICCR. Those interested should contact ICCR for more information.

Subscriber Service. Those who join the Subscriber Service have the opportunity to consult with ICCR staff on corporate responsibility issues and receive five subscriptions to the "Corporate Examiner", a copy of "Church Proxy Resolutions", background materials on corporate responsibility issues and detailed analysis of specific questions, all designed to assist local and regional church groups, institutional investors, investment advisors and activist shareholders. $300 per year.

The Corporate Examiner. Published ten times yearly, corporate responsibility's leading newsletter reports "Corporate Action News", analyzes corporate responsibility issues and trends in a four-page "Brief", reviews publications and media, presents opinions and ideas of corporate responsibility leaders and examines U.S. church and corporate policies and actions on South Africa, nuclear weapons, environment, foreign investment, minorities and women, health, hunger, energy, human rights and alternative investments. Annual subscriptions: single $25; five for $100.

Contributions. ICCR is a tax-exempt, nonprofit organization, incorporated in the State of New York. Tax deductible contributions may be made to the Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility.
