Proposed New Classroom Building for M.S.C.

Building Program Takes Shape

The State Board of Agriculture, governing body of Michigan State College, has announced plans for financing a $6,000,000 campus building program involving the construction of three women's dormitories, two men's halls, an apartment building for World War II veterans, an addition to the Union building, and a food storage unit.

Arrangements to finance the huge building program are being handled by the Ann Arbor Trust Co., from whom the State Board borrowed the money to be paid back over a period of 20 years from the income received from the buildings. All buildings in this group are self-liquidating. Karl H. McDonel, secretary of the State Board, said the college would operate the buildings from their revenue and turn over the balance to the trust company to retire interest and pay the debt.

Bonds will be retired serially during the 20-year period with interest at 1 per cent during the first two years and increased to a varying rate from 1½ to 2 per cent. The bonds have been sold at par through the Detroit National Bank and a group of Michigan bond underwriters.

Approximate cost of the buildings will be as follows: three women's dormitories, $2,286,000; two men's dormitories, $1,404,500; apartment for war veterans, $600,000; addition to Union, $1,176,650; food storage building, $250,000; contingencies and furnishings, $282,850.

Other structures planned for the near future are a classroom building, poultry building, and natural science building. The classroom building will contain 50 classrooms with a seating capacity of 3,204. Designed to harmonize with the architecture of neighboring campus buildings, the fireproof brick structure will occupy a site just north of the horticulture building. The interior will be of glazed brick and plaster, and heat will be supplied from the central heating plant. Strictly a classroom building, without laboratories or offices, the large structure will be used by classes from all M.S.C. schools. Construction will require from eight months to a year depending upon availability of labor and materials. Cost of the building will be approximately $700,000.

Additional dormitories are greatly needed. Enrollment of women students this fall was expected to reach 3,500, the largest number of girls ever to enroll at M.S.C., and late in August admissions of out-of-state girls were discontinued because of the acute housing shortage. S. E. Crowe, dean of students, predicted that at least 500 women students would be unable to find accommodations unless the residents of Lansing, East Lansing and Okemos volunteered their help in the emergency.

Faculty Changes Made

Hazel B. Strahan was appointed head of the textiles, clothing and related arts department, school of home economics, by the State Board of Agriculture, governing body of Michigan State College, at a recent meeting. Dr. G. M. Trout, was named acting head of the dairy department.

Miss Strahan has been associated with M.S.C. since 1934, and has taught courses in textiles, clothing, and retailing. A graduate of the University of Chicago with a bachelor of philosophy degree, she received the master of science degree from New York University. Miss Strahan taught at the Northern Illinois State Teachers College, DeKalb, in 1924-30, and from 1931 to 1934 was assistant professor of textiles and clothing at Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College, Stillwater.

Dr. Trout, professor and research professor in dairy, has been associated with Michigan State since 1928. He will direct the department during the absence of Dr. Earl Weaver, now in England for six months for the War Department as a faculty member in one of the university study centers used in the Army's educational program.

Dr. Robert L. Carolous was appointed professor and research professor of horticulture, effective September 15. He replaces Keith C. Barrons who resigned several months ago to join the Dow Chemical Company of Midland. Dr. Carolous holds the doctor of philosophy degree from Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., and comes to M.S.C. from the Virginia Truck Experiment station at Norfolk, Va.

Other appointments approved by the State Board include 10 associate professors, 14 assistant professors, and two members of the board of examining and academic counseling. Promotions include the following: Evelyn Mansfield, from assistant professor to associate professor of textiles, clothing and related arts; C. A. Miller, from assistant professor to associate professor of civil engineering.

The Board reinstated the following members of the faculty: Orion Ulrey, associate professor and research associate in economics; Dr. V. G. Grove, professor of mathematics; Dr. Philip J. Schaible, research professor of agricultural chemistry; Horace A. Cardinell, research associate in horticulture; Ivan F. Schneider, research associate in soil science; Dr. Denzel C. Cline, associate professor and research associate in economics; Stanley E. Howell, assistant professor of foreign languages; and Dr.

Charles P. Wells, assistant professor of mathematics.

Retirement was granted to Roswell J. Carr, who has been associated with the M.S.C. extension service since 1915, first as a county agricultural agent and later on a quarter-time basis as assistant state leader and state administrator for the Farm Security Administration. Mr. Carr henceforth will devote his full time to the F.S.A.

Other Board action included the acceptance of gifts totalling $10,170 as follows: S. C. Johnson and Son, Inc., of Racine, Wis., $3,000 for a two-year research study on wax and oil emulsion coatings for fruits and vegetables Parke, Davis and Company, Detroit, $935 for vitamin research work in the chemistry department; Horse and Mule Association of America, Chicago, $1,500 for 10 special short course scholarships of $150 each; Cooperative G.L.F. Mills, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y., $1,000 for a scholarship fund; Borden Company, New York City, $200 for research on cleaners and sanitizers used in the dairy industry; Edward R. Lake, Fairfax, Va., $200, the value of 800 books dealing with agriculture and related fields; Southern Agricultural Chemical Corporation, Atlanta, Ga., for fungicide research; Matthew R. Kaplan, Lansing, $175 for the library fund; Borden Company Foundation, Inc., New York City, $1,500 for establishing a scholarship award in veterinary medicine; National Association of Ice Industries, Washington, D. C., $1,000 for refrigeration research studies; Freeport Sulphur Company, New Orleans, La., $250 for research in horticulture; Michigan Pest Control Operators Association, Lansing, $110 for a student loan fund for students specializing in pest control.

Building Program

Applications for admission were 25 per cent ahead of last year, and fewer cancellations were received than in any previous year. A month before the opening of the fall term the college had exhausted all available facilities, including guest rooms and lounge rooms in the Union building. All women's dormitories, sororities, and cooperative houses are filled to capacity. Mason and Abbot halls, men's dormitories, North Hall, formerly occupied by Army trainees, and fraternity houses, also are being used by women students. A contingent of 325 Army Specialized Training program men occupy Wells hall, men's dormitory, and all other men must live off-campus.

Enrollment of 5,000 Civilian Students Expected This Fall

Just before registration for the fall quarter, indications were that as many as 5,000 civilian students—3,500 women and 1,500 men—would be enrolled at Michigan State College. Freshman week began on September 17 and registration was September 20-21.

Robert S. Linton, registrar, reported that a last-minute rush had been started by new men students. More than thirty applications for admission were being received daily from high school graduates, a large number of whom were boys. Applications from girls declined following the announcement that out-of-state women could no longer be admitted because of the acute housing shortage.

A 38 per cent increase in new student admissions over a corresponding time last year was noted. As of September 1, a total of 1,814 students who will attend the college for the first time this fall had been admitted. New students included 415 men and 1,399 women. A contingent of 325 17-year-old youths recently arrived on the campus for training under the Army Specialized Training program.

Increases were shown in every school by new students' preference of courses. Biggest gains were recorded for the schools of engineering and business and public service, with increases of 67 per cent and 64 per cent respectively.

New student admissions by schools as of September 1 were as follows: Basic (no preference), 151; agriculture, 56; business and public service, 301; engineering, 104; home economics, 344; science and arts, 660; veterinary medicine, 77; and Servicemen's Institute, 121.

"Any number of parents of high school students who have just completed their junior year already are inquiring about the fall term of 1946," Mr. Linton said. "Since 1937, when I became associated with the registrar's office, there never has been a time when there was anywhere near as much interest shown in the college as there has been this summer. Our enrollment is definitely on the way up again. Our job now is to get ready to take care of it."

Michigan State College opens the fall quarter with five new department heads. Shown here, left to right, they are: C. Howard Church, art; F. Lyle Wynd, botany; Arthur W. Farrall, agricultural engineering; Dr. Harold B. Tukey, horticulture; and Hazel Strahan, textiles, clothing and related arts.

How M. S. C. Served in the War

EDITOR'S NOTE—With the world once more at peace and Michigan State's campus returning again to a peacetime basis, it may be well to pause for a moment to review some of the ways in which M.S.C. men and women served their country during the war.

Michigan State College went to war with the outbreak of hostilities on December 7, 1941.

Since Pearl Harbor, more than 6,000 Michigan State men and women have left their studies to enter military service, and of this number 285 are known to have given their lives. Staff members also have served, 166 having been given leaves-of-absence for military service or for service connected with the war effort. Three of them have been killed.

When America entered the war the college immediately established new wartime courses, revised others to meet the demands of war, and began training men and women for the armed services and related fields. At the same time, M.S.C. did not lose sight of the war's prime objective—a just, enduring peace. Michigan State maintained that in wartime one of its major responsibilities was to offer to men and women not in uniform a broad liberal education to equip them for useful postwar roles.

M.S.C. became one of the most important military training centers in the country. Since March 25, 1943, when the first army students arrived on the campus approximately ten thousand men have received training on the East Lansing campus. This figure includes soldiers in the Army Specialized Training Program, the 310th College Training (Aircrew) Detachment, 2590th Base Unit (Aircrew), both of which terminated on June 30, 1944, the Army Specialized Training Reserves, the Specialized Training Assignment and Re-classification program terminated early in July, 1943, the Army Enlisted Reserve Corps, and the R.O.T.C. Peak enrollment of trainees during this period was 3,500, which represented more than one-half the total registration of 6,441.

The arrival of the army men necessitated shifts in teaching personnel from one department to another. Members from one department were lent to another to handle increased teaching responsibilities. For example, the teaching load in the department of physics increased five-fold. Other departments experienced similar increased teaching loads. Five members of the chemistry department staff worked on the atomic bomb project.

Courses to meet the social and economic problems created by the war were set up. Every project in research, instruction, and extension was evaluated on the basis of its contribution toward victory. Among the courses were map making from aerial photography, geopolitics, industrial feeding management, food technology, contemporary history, and Japanese, Russian, Portuguese and Arabic languages.

Early in the war M.S.C. established the Institute of Foreign Studies as part of a sound educational program to give students an understanding of China and South American countries. Through this institute students at M.S.C. are becoming familiar with the culture, commerce, history, and agriculture of peoples of these countries.

Another highlight in M.S.C.'s contribution to the war effort was the physical fitness program in the department of physical education for men. Here, each man in uniform was required to spend six hours weekly in competition, participating in basketball, football, baseball, boxing, and other body building contests.

Women, too, were trained for specialized wartime activities. During their senior year in college, 36 received $1200 scholarships from the Pratt-Whitney Aircraft corporation. Upon graduation the women engineers were employed by industry and were given the same opportunity for advancement as other male and female employees.

M.S.C. cooperated with the federal government in the development of courses under the Engineering Science Management War Training Program. Since the program began in 1940 M.S.C. has offered 114 different courses to 4,592 men and women seeking training to do better work on the industrial production front. Courses were conducted in about a dozen cities at the request of war industries needing specialized technical training for their employees.

In the field of research M.S.C. assumed additional responsibilities. Considerable investigation centered around food production and preservation. Specialists in horticulture searched for the substance which caused spoilage in dehydrated vegetables and fruits, thereby assisting materially in saving more food for battle fronts where food must be stored in hot climates. M.S.C. specialists found ways of preserving food better for these combat zones. Plant pathologists and other college specialists developed methods to speed up production of the raw material from which the new drug, penicillin, is derived. Other research dealt with finding ways to alleviate food shortage. Special research centered around attractive ways to prepare game food, to plan

King Is Appointed Counselor for Men At Michigan State

Tom H. King, head of the M.S.C. department of police administration and director of the college placement service, on September 20 was appointed counselor for men and director of the Servicemen's Institute by the State Board of Agriculture, Michigan State governing body.

Mr. King succeeds Dr. Fred T. Mitchell, who on October 1 becomes president of Mississippi State College. In addition to his new duties, he will continue to handle his other work.

A native of Boone county, Indiana, Mr. King received the degree of bachelor of philosophy from the University of Notre Dame in 1918, and in 1928 was awarded the bachelor of laws degree from the University of Louisville. He served as coach and director of athletics at the latter institution from 1925 to 1932.

Professor King has been associated with Michigan State College since 1933, when he came here as football end coach. He is a member of Sigma Delta Kappa, legal fraternity, past president of the Lansing Rotary club, and recently was elected president of the State College club for the coming year.

M.S.C. Chemists on Atom Bomb Project

Two full-time staff members and three graduate assistants in the department of chemistry at Michigan State College cooperated in the scientific program leading to production of the atomic bomb, it has been revealed.

They are Dr. Laurence L. Quill, head of the department; Dr. Dwight T. Ewing, professor of physical chemistry; and John McCallum, J. F. Metcalf, and Donald Bailey, former graduate assistants.

Dr. Quill is associated with the program of the metallurgical laboratory at the University of Chicago, and the work done by Dr. Ewing and the assistants was conducted on the campus of Michigan State College by means of a special grant. Dr. Ewing worked part-time on the project over a two-year period.

Because of the nature of the research work being done, the chemists were required to maintain complete secrecy.

Winifred S. Gettemy Dies

Winifred Sarah Gettemy, former associate professor of home economics at Michigan State College, died September 6 at the Edward W. Sparrow hospital, Lansing, after being in ill health for some time.

Homecoming

November 3, 1945, the day the Spartans meet the Missouri Tigers, has been designated as Homecoming Day. The celebration this year, of necessity, will be limited due to crowded conditions.

The usual pre-game alumni smoker will be held in the American Room of the Hotel Olds in Lansing following the big pep-rally on the Capitol building steps. Sponsored by the Central Michigan Alumni Club and the Alumni Varsity Club, the affair will feature talks by Coach Bachman and his staff and will include movies of several 1945 games.

The Muskegon high school band will perform at the game and alumni will assemble, immediately after the game, by class groups, on the edge of the playing field. Alumni will register at the Union up to game time.

Fraternity and sorority houses will be decorated and the usual Homecoming Dance will start in the Auditorium at nine o'clock.

Plan now to attend!

Mitchell Is Named To Presidency of His Alma Mater

Dr. Fred T. Mitchell, counselor for men and director of the Servicemen's Institute at Michigan State College, on September 14 was appointed president of Mississippi State College, Starkville, by the board of regents of that institution, effective October 1.

A native of Clarksburg, Miss., Dr. Mitchell was granted the degree of bachelor of science from Mississippi State College in 1913.

He received the master of arts degree from Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., in 1926, and the doctor of philosophy degree from Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., in 1931.

In returning to his alma mater as its president, Dr. Mitchell rounds out a long and active career in education. For five years he taught science in secondary schools of Arkansas, and was supervisor of secondary education in that state from 1924 to 1930. He served as an instructor at Peabody College and Cornell University.

Dr. Mitchell came to Michigan State College in 1931 as associate professor of education, in charge of the teacher training program. When in May, 1935, the office of dean of men was created, Dr. Mitchell was named to that position and soon earned the reputation of being a real friend of all men students. A clue to his success in working with young people may be found in a statement he once made: "I am interested in people, not in records."

Last year Dr. Mitchell was appointed director of the Servicemen's Institute, a position which he carried on in addition to his duties as counselor for men. "The Servicemen's Institute," he said at that time, "hopes to avoid some of the mistakes made by educational institutions after the last war when veterans complained that educators gave them the 'run-around' because there was no program that considered the men's personal problems." The M.S.C. program for servicemen, instituted under Dr. Mitchell's direction, has won wide acclaim.

Four Staff Members Die in Recent Weeks

Four members of the Michigan State College staff—T. Glenn Phillips, landscape architect, James T. Caswell, assistant professor of political science, Robert J. Patrick, bacteriology instructor, and Harald S. Patton, professor of economics—have died in recent weeks.

A graduate of the college in 1902, Mr. Phillips died in University hospital, Ann Arbor, on August 4 at the age of 68. Mr. Phillips had been associated with the college since his graduation and for the past 25 years was in charge of the landscaping that has made the campus one of the most beautiful in the world. He served numerous cities and institutions as an adviser on landscape architecture.

Mr. Patrick, 32, Michigan State graduate in 1931, was killed in a fall from a horse near the campus on July 21. Mr. Patrick received the master of science degree from M.S.C. in 1939 after serving as an industrial fellow in bacteriology for one year. He had been a bacteriology instructor since 1941.

Professor Caswell, 62 years old, died of a heart attack at Black Mountain, N. C., on August 15 while on a vacation trip. A graduate of Michigan State Normal College, Ypsilanti, and the University of Michigan, Professor Caswell had been a member of the M.S.C. staff for 20 years. Previously he had been

Mastodon Skeleton Bought for Museum

A 20,000-year-old mastodon skeleton, discovered recently in a swamp near Plainwell, Allegan county, has been purchased by Michigan State College for its museum, Joseph W. Stack, museum director, announced. Exhumation of the bones has already begun.

Found on the farm of Dale Keith, the skeleton of the prehistoric animal is buried in soft muck three feet deep. Workmen unearthed some of the bones while digging a drainage ditch, but it is not yet known whether the skeleton is complete.

Preliminary exploratory work by R. A. Smith, state geologist, revealed that the skeleton of the elephant-like creature is in an excellent state of preservation, even the cartilage pads being well preserved. Mr. Smith explained that the lack of decay was due to the fact that the skeleton had been under water and not exposed to the open air. Vegetation in the immediate area also is said to be in near-perfect condition.

Already recovered are the lower jaw with teeth, several ribs, a front leg bone, and parts of the spinal column. These bones have been placed in the cellar of the Keith home and others will be stored there until all have been recovered, according to Professor Stack. They will then be dried, covered with a dilute solution of shellac, and carefully packed before being shipped to the museum for assembly.

While the size of the beast can only be estimated, Mr. Smith believes it was somewhat smaller than the famed Jumbo elephant of the circus.

Alumni Scholarship Holders Rank High

Glen O. Stewart, director of alumni relations at Michigan State College, reports that the 140 students attending the college during the 1944-45 school year on alumni undergraduate scholarships maintained a composite scholastic average of 2.12 (3.0 is perfect) as compared with the all-student average of 1.50.

By classes, the scholarship students had the following averages: freshmen, 2.09; sophomores, 2.02; juniors, 2.24; and seniors, 2.12. For the same period, the average for all men students was 1.38 and for all women students 1.54.

Each scholarship given by Michigan State alumni clubs and committees amounts to $135 a year or $45 a quarter, representing a waiver of tuition by the college. If scholastic standards are maintained by a scholarship winner, the grant may be continued through the entire college course of 12 quarters.

Three of the youngest teachers who attended the rural education workshop at Michigan State College in August are shown here looking over a display of books arranged by the Michigan State Library, Lansing. They are, left to right, Dolores Fisher, Grand Haven, Flint kindergarten teacher; Joyce Neal, Lansing, teacher in the Dimondale school; and Joyce Weinman, Charlotte, who teaches in Eaton county.

War Veterans Attend M. S. C.

Between 500 and 600 war veterans are expected to be among some 5,000 civilian students enrolled for fall quarter classes at Michigan State College. A 25 per cent increase over last fall is anticipated in civilian enrollment, and in addition 325 17-year-old youths will receive instruction on the campus under the Army Specialized Training program.

Among the veterans enrolling will be approximately 200 men who have never attended Michigan State before and a dozen or more former students who are returning to the East Lansing institution to complete courses interrupted by the war. Dr. Fred T. Mitchell, director of the Servicemen's Institute, reports that on an average 30 requests for information about the college are received each week from discharged servicemen.

The greatest single problem of these war veterans, according to Dr. Mitchell, is that they have been away from high school for from three to 10 years and are apprehensive as to whether or not they can do work at the college level. For men who find themselves mentally "rusty," Michigan State College has set up refresher courses in English, mathematics, science, and history—non-credit double-period review courses which have been taken for one term by more than half the 314 ex-servicemen enrolled during the last three regular quarters.

By and large, these veterans received better grades than the average student. This Dr. Mitchell attributes to their social—not necessarily chronological—maturity, their desire for an education, and their willingness to make the best use of their time.

"These men are not asking for a short-cut but they do want a solid program of education without trivia, and they want it in the shortest time that is consistent with good practice," Dr. Mitchell says. "They are in a hurry to get through college but not in so big a hurry as to wish to slight their work."

About 27 per cent of the veterans attending Michigan State are married. The former servicemen mix into the general stream of college life quickly, and, like other students, take part in campus activities such as the student council, athletics, dramatics, and fraternities. They are encouraged to live in homes with other students, not in groups of their own.

Following completion of basic college courses, the veterans enroll in courses in which they have a special interest. Dr. Mitchell says that their interests are as varied as those of any other students, but that perhaps more interest is expressed in forestry than in any other phase of agriculture.

While no new refresher courses are planned, it may be necessary to add new sections in order to keep classes small enough for tutorial-type instruction. Second term review classes for some of the men also may be added.

Basic Plan Wins Praise

One year ago the attention of educators throughout the nation was drawn to Michigan State College where something new in education, the basic college, was being established. The idea was greeted with enthusiasm by some, with skepticism by others. Today, those directly concerned — M.S.C. students, teachers, and administrators—in general are well satisfied with the first year's results.

The plan has four specific purposes: To strengthen specialized training by supporting it with a broader educational foundation, to give students a chance to explore different areas and thereby base their plans on real interests and aptitudes, to make college experiences more valuable to students who do not complete a degree-granting program, and to improve the basis for measuring educational attainments and provide greater opportunity for each student to work at his own rate.

All freshmen and sopomores are required to take five of seven basic courses—Written and Spoken English, Biological Science, Physical Science, Social Science, Effective Living, History of Civilization, and Literature and Fine Arts. Each course runs for three college quarters. Comprehensive examinations are held at the end of the nine months and credit is given to those making passing grades, even if they have never been enrolled in the course and have never attended class.

A good deal of grumbling was heard around the campus when examination time approached last spring. "Students are just as conservative as anybody else," Howard C. Rather, dean of the basic college, explains, "and before they took the examinations many of them complained. They were afraid of the new system."

When examination results came in, however, their fears proved to have been unfounded. Of 3,325 grades reported, 98.3 per cent were passing marks. During the year, 341 students who had had less than the normal three terms of course work took comprehensive examinations and 301 of them passed with grades of C or better. Sixty-four war veterans, quick to take advantage of the opportunity, were among them.

Fifteen students took examinations without having been enrolled in the courses. They had done their work outside of class. Fourteen of them passed. An ex-serviceman took four comprehensive examinations after two terms in each course. He received an A, two B's, and a C—and 27 credits.

Dean H. C. Rather

One of the objectives of the plan is to make it easy for a student to change from one course to another in search of the field in which he has the greatest interest and ability. Two hundred fifty-eight such changes were recorded the first year the basic college was in operation.

Dean Rather points out that it is extremely important to have superior teaching for college students in their first courses, and every effort is made to secure capable teachers. To teach the 3,000 students who will be enrolled in the basic college this fall, 86 instructors have been employed. Of this number, 41 also teach in the upper schools and 45 work entirely in the basic college. Twenty-six full-time instructors will be required to teach the 87 sections of Written and Spoken English, which all basic college students must take.

Basic courses are taught from the standpoint of everyday living. Necessary specialized training is provided by other courses. To keep the general courses alive and stimulating, revisions will be made at the end of each year.

An extensive counseling program is carried on under the guidance of the dean of students. Most of the basic college counselors are teachers in the upper schools. They help the student with study plans and with personal problems. A board of examiners prepares all examinations in cooperation with the department, administers the tests, and grades them, thus relieving the teacher of that responsibility.

Response to the basic college plan has been favorable off campus as well as among students and staff, Dean Rather reports. Business and professional people like the program because of the breadth of training it offers and the opportunity it gives the student to discover his own interests and abilities.

How successful is the Michigan State College program for basic education? The answer cannot be determined until the boys and girls now enrolled have gone out into the world and are on the job. In the meantime, M.S.C. thinks it is moving in the right direction.

Bands Will Play For Home Games

Martial music on parade will prevail at this fall's Michigan State home football games despite continued casualty of the Spartans' crack military band. The unit has been in wartime suspension since 1943.

Leonard V. Falcone, M.S.C. band director, announces the appearance of several outstanding high school bands of the state. Scheduled are: Oct. 6, Battle Creek; Oct. 20, Jackson; Oct. 27, Grand Rapids South; Nov. 3, Muskegon; Nov. 10, Flint Central; Nov. 17, Lansing Sexton and Eastern bands.

In line with the schedule, plans are underway through alumni and civic groups to designate special days at Macklin Stadium honoring the town whose band appears.

During the school year, Falcone expects to lay plans for fielding in 1946 a military band of pre-war quality. In the meantime, an organization of co-ed and male students will offer selections from the stadium during the games.

Jack was the workhorse of the 1944 team that won six victories in seven starts. The Battle Creek lad accounted for 795 yards, which was just 105 yards short of equaling the total yardage of State's seven opponents.

Voted by his teammates as the most valuable member of the squad, Jack climaxed the 1944 season by starring on the All-East team in the Shrine game at San Francisco.

Two of the M.S.C. alumni who gathered in Manila for the reunion—Ruth Ryder, '36, who helped engineer the get-together, and L. Hidrosollo, '09, of Manila.

Story of Manila Reunion

By Ruth Ryder, '34, A.R.C.

In September 1944, I was transferred from Port Moresby, New Guinea, to Brisbane, Australia, to join the theater headquarters of the American Red Cross. Just after my arrival a letter came to me from Lt. Frank Jones, '34, who was then in the Nadjab. He said in the letter, although he had never known me in college, his former landlady had written him that I was in Moresby, and that if I ever got to Nadjab, to please look him up, as he would like to talk to someone from East Lansing. Naturally, I felt the same way. But Brisbane is a long way from Nadjab. So I wrote back to Frank and said "Let's have a rendezvous in the Philippines!" And his answer was, "Great!" Then I next wrote and suggested that we get all the Michigan State College people together in Manila. Frank was so enthused that he dashed off a note to Glen Stewart, at the alumni office in East Lansing.

Frank and I were getting previous in our planning and thought it could be a New Year's Reunion. But by that time Mr. Stewart caught our messages—he could better see how things were working out here—so he wrote "Why not in June, the same time we have Alumni Day on the Campus?" We were really impressed with that and went ahead on that idea. In the meantime, Frank had gone to Hollandia, and I got there a week after he had gone to Leyte.

In March I by-passed Leyte and flew directly to Manila, much to Frank's disgust, because then it looked like he might miss the whole show. But we kept firing letters back and forth—spasmodically, as we found time, and both of us completely in the dark as to what the other looked like.

Upon arrival in Manila, I found that the Army had very few supplies, the Red Cross much less, and the civilians practically nothing. But we were determined to build a Red Cross Club—which we did—although when I wrote to Mr. Stewart and told him in issuing the notices to tell the old grads to come there on June 10, the building was an utter shambles.

On April 17, after a hectic month, the Red Cross Manila Club No. 1 opened—Mrs. MacArthur et al. On April 22 we pinned a notice on the bulletin board that there would be a Michigan State Reunion in Manila on June 10, place yet undecided, but to please sign the register at the information desk. Although I was seldom in the club, I kept my eye on that register and watched in amazement as the list grew and grew. Signs were made and placed in G.H.Q. Base X, the Red Cross Club and USASOS Hq. The newspaper Free Philippines also carried ample notices.

In May letters started pouring in. Boys came to see me, and my telephone was busy. On May 22 the beautiful Michigan State booklet, which President Hannah had mailed in November, arrived and gave me a new inspiration. And, best of all, during the last week in May Frank Jones arrived in Manila and he and Wayne Lee came over to see me. It was good to know that I had physical support as well as moral. We really planned the event that day.

Food was a problem. But Jimmie Lyman, Q.M.C., came to the rescue with fruit juice, coffee, pretzels, tuna fish, tomatoes and pickles, and John Bozek brought in some beautiful cakes. Red Cross commissary furnished stuffed buns and doughnuts. So one problem was solved.

Then on Saturday, June 9, the long awaited colored sound movie arrived. During the afternoon in flew "Bud" Bell from Leyte, and Dick Robinson from Batangas—and we were off to a flying start.

Sunday dawned clear and very hot. The fellows started coming via plane, ship, jeep, foot and thumb. Brothers had reunions, fraternities had joyous get-togethers, and State's football and basketball games were replayed and rehashed. For once the Air Corps men talked about something besides planes and take-offs.

Because the reunion had to be held in the Red Cross area mess hall, at noon and at night for an hour and a half, I had to shoo them out, while Red Cross people ate. There just wasn't room for all. Surprisingly enough every one came back at 7 p.m. We had the movie, then the supper and after that just a free-for-all chat.

Ted Bath cornered everyone and had them sign the M.S.C. Manila Reunion Book (now on display in the alumni office) and collected two pesos apiece. That covered all expenses and left $10.00 for a donation to the alumni office work.

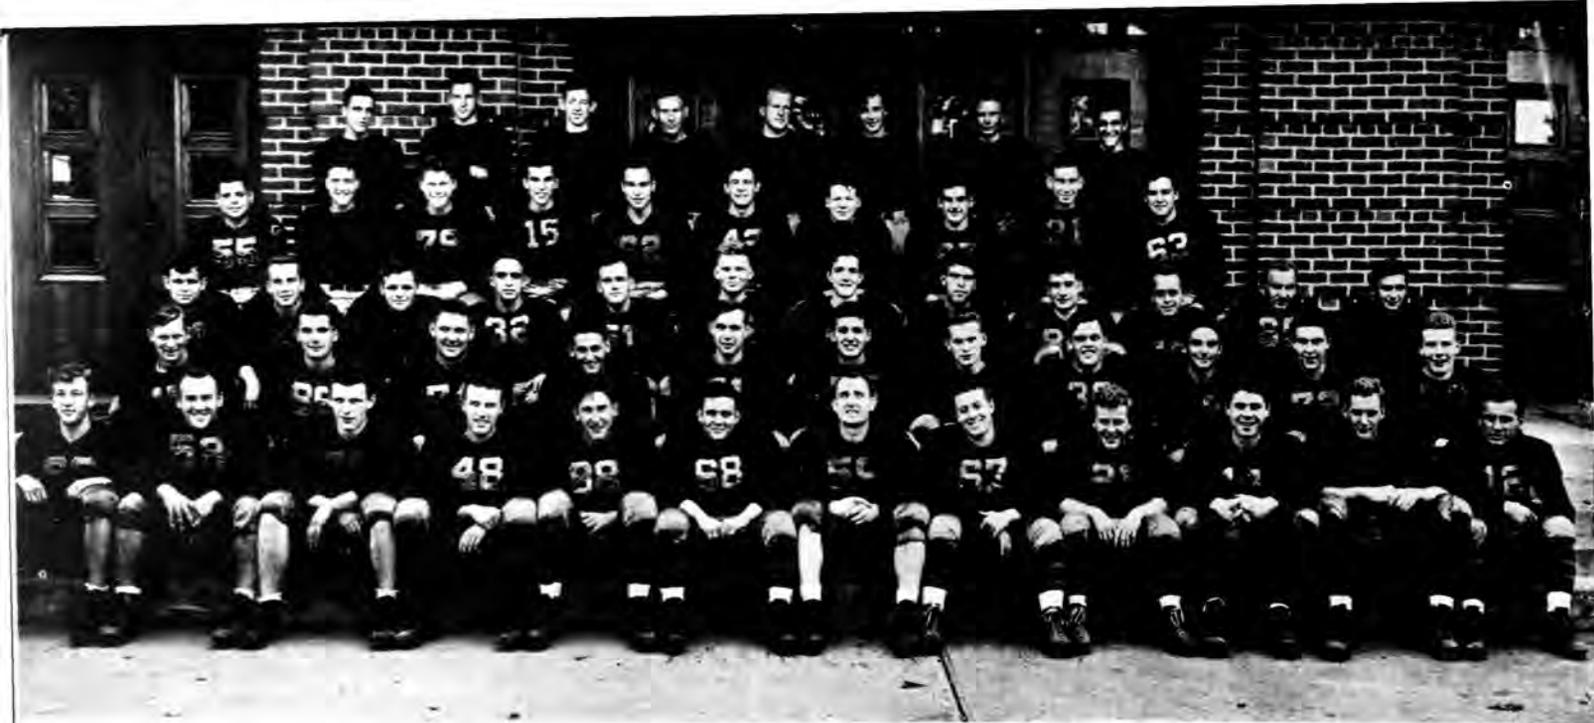

Girls? Well, as our Philippine waitress said, "Miss Ryder, didn't any females attend your college?" And all I could do was wonder the same thing. Fortunately, Jeannette Loree came in for 10 minutes and saved the day for me. Other than that I was hostess for 85 or more men and sole representative of the co-eds of M.S.C. But it was loads of fun and one of the nice remembrances I shall have of my life over-seas. On Monday following the reunion, the wireless from President Hannah and Glen Stewart arrived and on the next Friday the M.S.C. banner came. But that's another story.

(Note—Miss Ryder is now in East Lansing spending a few weeks' deserved rest with her mother, Mrs. E. H. Ryder, at 420 Evergreen street.)

The following people signed the Manila register:

Cpl. Wm. H. Faust, '42; Ensign Merle Jennings, '43; Lt. Joe LeValley, '43; Don Manion, '40; Ensign F. A. Bell, '43; Capt. Harry D. Macy.

Michigan State College's 1945 Football Squad

Sports at State

By Nick Kerbawy

Michigan State's 1945 football schedule of nine games offers a succulent dish that will savor the palate of the most severe critic.

It is a schedule described by Athletic Director Ralph H. Young as about the toughest the Spartans have ever had, with six games to be played in East Lansing.

All roads led to Ann Arbor on September 29 as the Spartans opened their season against University of Michigan. It marked the first State-Michigan game since the war forced cancellation of all athletics at State early in 1943.

If first impressions are lasting, then State's opening home games with Kentucky on October 6 should be a dandy. Last year, at Lexington, the Spartans squeaked through with a 2 to 0 victory over a huge Wildcat team in a game that left the fans limp from excitement. The defeat was a bitter pill for Kentucky and Head Coach Bernie Shively should have it easy boosting his charges for revenge. He'll be talking to Wash Serini and Hugh Shannon, a pair of tackles weighing 225 and 220-pounds respectively, backfieldmen Dutch Campbell, Bill Chambers, and Roger Yost, all of whom remember the defeat only too well as does Wilbur Schu whose punt Don Grondzik blocked for State's victory. Don't miss this one!

Master tactician Clark Shaughnessy would like nothing better than to have Pittsburgh open grid relations with State at Pittsburgh on October 13 with a victory.

In 1942, an alert Nick Cherup disregarded the final gun to snatch a loose forward pass and scamper some 40 yards for a touchdown. It was Wayne University's only score against the Spartans' 46. Well, Cherup is back from the Army to lead Coach Joe Gembis' Tartars onto Macklin Field, October 20. Tickets for this game will be sold at a reduced price.

From Marquette comes word that Tom Stidham promises the Spartans a busy afternoon October 27 on Macklin Field. Stidham has experienced men, big and fast, for all positions but guard. The Hill-toppers are led by Ends Carl Kaminski and Bob Quinsey, Tackles Bob Richardson and Jim Terry, Ray Metcher at guard, Dick Pooler at center, John Rudan, a triple-threater, leading the backs. Yes, here's one you'll want to take in.

Can you imagine a Sherman tank on the gridiron? Well, that is about what to expect when you drive to East Lansing for the Missouri game, November 3. Incidentally, that's not only State's homecoming, but a chance for the Spartans to settle matters of a 13 to 7 setback handed them by Missouri at Columbia last year. 'Twas State's one defeat in 1944. Getting back to the Sherman tank, Jim Kekeris, a 340-pound pile-driver, after nearly two seasons at tackle was shifted to fullback. Jim's big and he can move! Then, there are teammates Bill Dellastatious, a fancy-stepper, and Leonard Brown who tasted Spartan blood and admitted liking it. Better get your tickets early for this one!

In 1942, Coach Bachman waded the Red Cedar River. He said he would if State beat Great Lakes. The score was 14 to 0 and who can forget that game! The Bluejackets return to East Lansing on November 10, this time led by the renowned Paul Brown, former Ohio State coach. The mere mention of Brown is reason enough for calling the Spartan Athletic Association to reserve those ducats, for Brown and the word "magic" are synonymous in football.

If you want to see a rugged line operate, then plan to be in East Lansing on November 17. It marks the Spartans' final home game pitting them against Penn State. Coach Bob Higgins' Nittany Lions have in Marion Marchi and Howard Caskey a pair of 225-pound tackles to lead an array of brawn and speed. Penn State rates games with Michigan State and Navy as best on its card.

Then for the Orange Bowl Stadium! The Spartans will ring down the curtain Friday night, November 23, below the Mason-Dixon line with University of Miami. Coach Eddie Dunn and his aides have wired Coach Bachman and the Spartans "Godspeed" in their travel but to expect a "Hurricane" ambush upon their arrival.

State's attack? Here are returned lettermen serving as a nucleus: Ends Dick Mineweaver of Pontiac and Dick Massuch of Lansing; Guards Bob Godfrey of Mt. Clemens, Don Arnson of Muskegon, and Bob Lamssies of South Haven; Center Brady Sullivan of Steubenville, Ohio. In the backfield are quarterbacks Bill Siler of Dundee and Glen

Athletic Director Begins 23rd Year At Michigan State

Ralph H. Young on September 1 added another milestone in commencing his 23rd year as the Spartan athletic director.

It was under Young's direction that Michigan State welded a magnificent structure in the field of athletics. In two decades, the Spartan athletic plan has reached heights that makes it just about the finest in the nation.

Young, whose fame incorporates indefatigable effort as an entertaining host, is one of few football men who played under both Alonzo A. Stagg and Fielding H. Yost. He played two years under Coach Stagg at University of Chicago. Then he played at Washington and Jefferson, where he graduated in 1915. He was a tackle under Coach Yost at Michigan in 1918 while training with the signal corps during World War I.

On September 1, 1923, Young transferred from Kalamazoo College to Michigan State as coach of all sports. He served as head football coach for five years. Gradual pressure brought by an enlarged physical education program forced him to yield not only football, but basketball, cross country, and track in favor of the office he now holds.

In 1926, with the late Knute Rockne of Notre Dame and Conrad Jennings of Marquette, he founded the Central Collegiate Conference to promote track and field athletics and cross country among mid-western colleges. The CCC meets are exceeded in size only by the National Collegiate meets.

His hobbies are hunting, fishing, and liking people.

Holsinger Is Ill; Jobs Are Shifted

In addition to directing Michigan State's football destinies, Charlie Bachman is doubling as the Spartans' backfield coach.

Bachman is substituting for Backfield Coach Joe Holsinger, who underwent a serious brain operation last August 2.

Meanwhile, Coach Karl Schlademan plans to live the coming season from a suitcase. With Holsinger removed from active duty, full brunt of scouting State's opponents falls on Schlademan.

Spartans Win A. A. U. Title

The best amateur swimming team recognized today in the United States by the American Amateur Union is enrolled at Michigan State College.

The Spartans captured the team title of the 1945 National A.A.U. outdoor swimming and diving championships last month in the gigantic Cuyahoga Falls pool near Akron.

In the three-day meet, they scored a total of 26 points to outdistance a field of 12 teams barely nipping Great Lakes whose Bluejackets tallied 23 points for second place.

Michigan State's victory was won largely through the efforts of four freshmen, led by Dave Seibold of Jackson, who shared individual meet honors.

Michigan State's Spartans captured the National A.A.U. swimming team championship with their coach 5,000 miles away!

Charles McCaffree Jr., Spartan mentor who brought the team together, is on duty in Italy as a civilian consultant in swimming with the Army Service Force of the Special Service Division.

Coach McCaffree expects to return to Michigan State in late October at expiration of a 90-day leave granted by the State Board of Agriculture. During his absence, the team was directed by Kenneth Hawk, a special instructor in physical education.

In the final event, Seibold nosed out Tom Gastineau of Great Lakes by three-tenths of a second in the 300-meter individual medley. Had Gastineau won, the title would have gone to the Bluejackets.

Trailing Michigan State and Great Lakes in the field point standings were: Ohio State, 18; Buffalo AC, 12; Camp Chikopi, 11; Oakland Swimming Association, 8; U. S. Naval Academy, 5; Mexican Swimming Federation, 5; Grand Rapids Y.M.C.A., 2; Erie (Pa.) Y.M.C.A., 2; Manhattan Beach Coast Guard, 1.

Seibold was one of the meet's three individual double winners. He also won the 200-meter breast stroke championship and swam on the championship 300-meter medley relay team. As a senior last spring at Jackson High, Seibold won the National A.A.U. indoor breast stroke championship in New York at 220-yards.

The remaining portion of Michigan State's 26 points was garnered by Howard Patterson of Saginaw, who captured second place in the 100-meter backstroke, barely missing the championship by a split second; John DeMond of Jackson and James Quigley of Saginaw who placed third and fourth respectively in the 100-meter free style; and the championship 300-meter medley relay team of Patterson, Seibold, and Quigley.

Charles E. Kellogg, '25

Dr. Charles E. Kellogg, chief of the division of soil survey, U. S. Department of Agriculture, plant industry section, Beltsville, Md., returned in July this summer from a trip around the world incidental to attending the celebration of the 220th anniversary of the Academy of Sciences of the U.S.S.R. He was one of 14 American scientists who attended the celebration at the invitation of the academy.

With the U.S.D.A. since 1935, Dr. Kellogg has served as the U. S. delegate to agricultural conventions in England, Italy, and Mexico. He is past president of the Soil Science Society of America, and a member of the International Society of Soil Science. He is concerned with post-war planning for agriculture and last spring was named one of four lecturers in the Messenger Foundation Series at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

Kellogg entered Michigan State from Ionia in 1921. He was a member of Phi Kappa Tau, Alpha Zeta, a captain in the R.O.T.C., and active in other campus affairs. He married Lucille J. Reasoner, '28, and returned here in 1929 to receive his Ph.D. degree in soils.

Carlton Eldridge, '34

Carlton Eldridge, Lansing tenor, has been without sight since early childhood yet does not consider blindness a handicap. To him it is only an inconvenience.

In 1934 he was graduated from Michigan State with a degree of bachelor of music, graduating "with high honors."

Possessing a wide repertoire in five languages for concert and radio performance, as well as the standard oratorios, his experience has been extensive. Many major music clubs and organizations throughout the Middle West and

Much of Eldridge's oratorio work has been done with college oratorio societies, and other engagements have been with the Inter-Church Chorus of Lansing and Michigan churches. His radio experience includes appearances on Detroit and Lansing stations, and as guest on several coast-to-coast network programs.

W. E. Sydenstricker, '40

Don Marshall, of New York City, who attended Michigan State from 1937 to 1940 under his real name of William Sydenstricker, is another student of Prof. Fred Patton's to make good on Broadway.

In the short time since leaving M.S.C. his rise in musical circles along Broadway has been rapid. He started in 1941 as soloist at Fordham Church and for two years was a member of Radio City Music Hall glee club. He later played in "New Moon" and after the run of that show last summer joined the New Opera company for a tour of the West Coast, playing a part in "The Merry Widow." Upon return to New York he was sought by composer Kurt Weill to take a leading part in his recent Broadway musical, "Firebrand of Florence," and was signed by producer Max Gordon. At present he is on overseas assignment with U.S.O.

While in college Bill lived at the home of Prof. and Mrs. Roy Marshall and has adopted the family name as his stage name.

Following Alumni Clubs

By Glen O. Stewart

New York City

The annual meeting of the Michigan State College Club of New York City will be held at 8 p.m., Thursday, October 11, in the Shelton hotel, Lexington avenue at 49th street. Ray C. Kinney, '21, president, has secured President John A. Hannah and Alumni Director Glen O. Stewart, as guest speakers from the college. The board of directors has held several meetings and is attempting to make this one of the largest alumni gatherings ever held in New York.—N. O. Weil, '17, secretary.

Pittsburgh Reunion

When Michigan State and Pittsburgh announced a football date for October 13, the old grads in this area immediately started plans for an alumni get-together. Arrangements have now been completed for an alumni rally in the Forum Room in the William Penn Hotel, Pittsburgh, at 8:30 p.m., October 12. Included in the official party from East Lansing will be President John A. Hannah and Alumni Director Glen O. Stewart. All men and women who ever attended Michigan State are urged to attend. Football movies will be shown.—Dwight Cavanaugh, '20, president.

Miami Meeting

Alumni who find it possible to attend the Friday night game between M.S.C. and the University of Miami, November 23, will be interested to learn that the team will be housed at the El Comodora hotel in Coral Gables. An official M.S.C. alumni headquarters will be open for all Spartans to register and meet their friends.

Picnic at Traverse

The Traverse City Shuffle Board Club was the scene of the annual M.S.C. Alumni Club picnic dinner and program on Saturday evening, August 18. More than 60 people enjoyed the dinner in the screened porch of the club following a few games of shuffleboard on the championship courts.

Glen O. Stewart spoke of the many changes contemplated in the physical plant of the college and told stories and anecdotes about many of the favorite old teachers. Football movies were shown as well as pictures of the dedication of the new Spartan statue, unveiled for the first time on Alumni Day, June 9.

Doug Linder presided at the business meeting. Eric Sleder, '36, was elected president, William Blanchard, '22, vice-president, and G. Karl Fisher, '15, re-named as secretary-treasurer.—G. Karl Fisher, '15, secretary.

Chicago Board

Under the general direction of President G. M. Glidden, '17, the Chicago M.S.C. Alumni Club has elected a new board of directors, adopted a new constitution and by-laws, and five or six committee chairmen have been appointed. Board meetings were held on July 14 and August 4. New alumni moving into the Chicago area are asked to call one of the following: President Galen M. Glidden, % E. D. Bullard Co., Kedzie 7230; Vice-President Paul "Jerry" Murdock, Harrison 3275, or the secretary, Mrs. Ralph Kortge (Mary Shively), Fairfax 4281.—Mary Shively Kortge, secretary.

Flint Alumnae

More than 50 alumnae of the Flint Alumnae League and girls entering M.S.C. this fall were entertained at a tea September 12 at the home of Mrs. Arthur Kramer, '34, 522 Copeman Blvd. Elizabeth Corbishley, housing director for women, was the guest speaker, telling the new students all about campus life, social activities, sorority rushing and answering hundreds of questions in the social hour.—Mrs. Alex Randolph, president (Thelma Plow, '35).

Club Presidents Will Assemble

Something new in alumni relations development will be the two-day meeting on November 9 and 10, when the presidents or their representatives of all local alumni clubs will meet at the college. Starting with a complimentary dinner at the Union on Friday evening, President John A. Hannah will trace briefly the changes that have been inaugurated in the teaching and extension phases of the college during the past three years, and will outline some suggestions for a stronger alumni program throughout the country.

The agenda for Saturday forenoon will cover many interesting items in the development of local alumni club programs and the delegates have been asked to take an active part in this discussion. At this date at least five men, representing large alumni groups outside of the state, have filed reservations, and most of the clubs within Michigan will be represented.

Delegates will attend the Great Lakes game on Saturday afternoon.

Milwaukee, Wisc.

Spartan alumni and their families in the Milwaukee area enjoyed a summer picnic September 11, one-fourth mile north of Bradford beach, in Milwaukee. The standard constitution, as suggested to the board by Glen Stewart, was read and approved. Plans for other meetings were discussed.—John Kline, '42, secretary.

Central Michigan

As The Record went to press, Central Michigan club members were making plans for a joint smoker with the U. of M. Club of Lansing, on Thursday evening, October 4, in Hotel Olds. More than 250 alumni of the two schools expected to be present to see movies of the Michigan-M.S.C. game. Lloyd Parr, president of the Michigan club, and Lee Benner, Don Stirm, and Glen Stewart, representing Michigan State, were set to share the duties of the evening.

Saginaw

A successful pre-game smoker was held jointly by the Saginaw M.S.C. alumni club and the U. of M. alumni club of that city. More than 125 men enjoyed the movies and other entertainment at the Bancroft hotel ballroom.—John Breyfogle, '28, secretary.

Collectors Wanted

Michigan State College graduates have been scattered throughout the world by the war. Now the college would like for them to become amateur collectors of historical, scientific and other material of value to its libraries and museums.

"The M.S.C. museum has a valuable gun and sword collection and would like to have additional pieces to bring it up to date," Prof. J. W. Stack, director, announced. "Also, if you are in an area where you could collect biological material (plant or animal) you should write to the museum before shipping such items so that information concerning packing can be sent to you."

Students collecting such material may send it C.O.D. to Museum, Michigan State College, East Lansing. Alumni also are requested to send in original documents or other material of enduring interest to the college library, to the alumni office, or to Prof. Madison Kuhn, college historian.

In striking contrast to the well-padded football players of today, members of the team of 1905 (upper left picture) didn't have much to shield them from bruises. Coach Chester L. Brewer's team of that year played an 11-game schedule and lost only two games, to Notre Dame and Northwestern. Those pictured are: (left to right) front row—Hitchcock, Doty, Small, Holdsworth, and Coach Brewer; middle row—Fraser, Shedd, Fisk, E. W. McKenna, McDirmond, Boyle, and P. G. McKenna; back row—Frank R. Parker, Strand, Boomsliter, Wright, Burroughs, Ward H. Parker and Kratz. Brewer coached football at Michigan State from 1902 to 1910 and in 1917 and 1919.

Traditionally, one thinks of military bands when he thinks of football. At the upper right-hand corner of this page is State's 62-piece band of 1914-15, their drum major and director. The director, on the extreme left, third row, was Prof. A. J. Clark. Professor Clark retired from the headship of the M.S.C. chemistry department this year after being associated with the department for 40 years.

The entering freshman in 1904 found the dust deep and the mud still deeper in the road (now Michigan Avenue) from Lansing to the college. When the above picture was taken East Lansing was yet unborn. For those who lacked buggies, there was a street car service.

About 20 years later, or in 1925, this is the sight that greeted a new student when he reached the intersection of Michigan and Grand River. Peoples Church was being built, as you can discern from the pile of brick shown on the left. This same intersection photographed in 1945 is shown on the right.

dishes with soybeans, and many other new ways to use products of the soil. At present M.S.C. has 230 research projects underway.

Student life on the campus was overshadowed by military influences. At social gatherings uniformed men held the spotlight and at all other student activities civilian men and women sought ways of doing their bit to promote the war effort through selling bonds, donating to the blood bank, directing salvage campaigns, participating in Red Cross work, and many other worthwhile activities through their association with the Michigan Office of Civilian Defense.

For returning veterans, M.S.C. established the Servicemen's Institute to advise veterans on educational programs to follow under the "GI Bill of Rights," which provides funds to continue their education. More than 300 ex-servicemen were enrolled in the college during the spring term this year.

Early in the war the M.S.C. extension service was given the responsibility by the federal government to direct the Emergency Farm Labor program, designed to aid farmers in Michigan with their labor shortage problems. During the first year of its operation 151,000 placements were made for farm labor assistance. The program involves handling migratory labor, youth and adult volunteers. County agricultural agents in Michigan and specially appointed Emergency Farm Labor assistants handle the program. Another contribution to the war effort comes from the influence of the Home Economics extension service whose members assisted in programs in nutrition, family health, and clothing.

Technical problems of production were solved during the war years. From the high point of helping produce record-breaking crops, the extension service expanded into dispensing information on substitute crops, and telling city families how to patch clothing and preserve garden crops as their rural cousins had done for decades. Two new sugar beet hybrids, resistant to leaf blight, were given approval to permit widespread planting by Michigan farmers. From the forestry section farmers were advised that it was practical to use jack pine for farm timber uses. Sawmills were listed so farmers could learn of outlets for timbers needed by war-time timber industries. Equipment was developed for simplifying commercial food dehydration. Quick turfs for airports were developed.

The contribution made by Michigan 4-H club boys and girls to the food campaign runs into impressive figures.

A new office of the Veterans Administration was established at Michigan State College to serve Central Michigan veterans of this war. The federal office cooperates closely with the selective service board, the U. S. Employment Service, the Servicemen's Institute of the college, and other similar agencies.

To provide emergency and concentrated training for former teachers who respond to the call for help in keeping Michigan's schools open during the serious teacher shortage, a rural education workshop was held at Michigan State College for two weeks in 1944 and again this summer.

A member of the college's education staff has devoted his full time to aiding the Office of Veterans' Affairs and local veterans counselors whose principal aim is to coordinate the vast flow of information affecting the ex-serviceman.

Three Michigan State staff members have been selected by the War Department to serve on the faculty of one of the university study centers to be used in the Army education program for troops in the European theater of operations. Another went to Europe on a special mission for the War Department.

Eleven Chinese technicians, part of a contingent of 600 sent to this country for study by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration, are at Michigan State College for a year of intensive training in veterinary medicine.

Numerous student and faculty entertainers have appeared at Percy Jones General Hospital in Battle Creek and before other groups of servicemen in Michigan to help boost the spirits of our fighting men.

superintendent of schools at Redridge, Mich., and dean of Highland Park Junior College.

Dr. Patton, a lieutenant colonel in the foreign affairs branch of the War Department while on leave from the college, was killed September 1 in a bus accident at the Pentagon Building, Washington, D. C. Dr. Patton held degrees from the University of Toronto and Harvard University. He served as assistant and associate professor of economics at the University of Cincinnati from 1925 to 1929, and was head of the M.S.C. department of economics from 1929 until he was commissioned a major in the U. J. W. Shirley Given Guggenheim Fellowship

Dr. John W. Shirley, associate professor of English at Michigan State College, has been awarded a John Simon Guggenheim fellowship for study in England. He will make a study of the unpublished manuscripts of Thomas Hariot, scientist, explorer, and mathematician.

During the war they were stored in a Welsh coal mine with other valuable documents. Dr. Shirley has been granted a one-year leave-of-absence from the college.

Hariot, who lived from 1560 to 1621, was mathematics tutor to Sir Walter Raleigh, and edited Sir Walter's "History of the World." He was sent to this country in 1585 as an official surveyor for the Roanoke colony, and wrote "A Brief and True Report of the New Found Land of Virginia."
