

"...the chief task of all FRELIMO militants is to further the work of organizing the masses and guiding them in each factory, each agricultural unit, each PFLM detachment, each cooperative, each neighborhood, each department, so that the government is constantly aware of the people's feelings and thoughts. In other words the FRELIMO militant's work is to create the conditions to release the creative initiative of the masses, to free them from passive obedience and to create structures and channels through which the will of the masses can determine government action."

Samora Machel,
President of FRELIMO
September 20, 1974

Waging war against illiteracy, improving health conditions, promoting agricultural development, establishing true political democracy--these are the goals of the Mozambican revolution. To achieve these goals, FRELIMO relies on the political education of the Mozambican people.

FRELIMO's Department of Information has asked for CFM's assistance in providing cameras and darkroom equipment to be used in its broad program of political education. This equipment will help enable FRELIMO to continue to carry the message of the revolution and news of national development to all parts of Mozambique.
